

Getting Blood Drawn

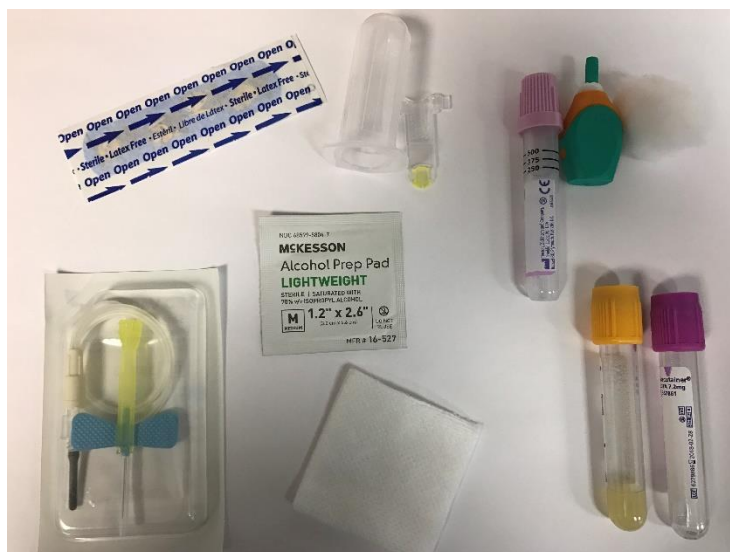

Sometimes when I see the doctor, I need to have a blood test.

The blood test helps the doctor know I am healthy.

First the nurse will put a rubber band around my arm to help see my veins.
Then the nurse will clean my arm with a wipe.

Then the nurse will put a small straw with a tip on it into the vein.

The blood will go through the straw into a small tube and then labeled with my name.

Last, the nurse will take the small straw out of the vein and put a Band-Aid on my arm.
