
Getting Blood Drawn

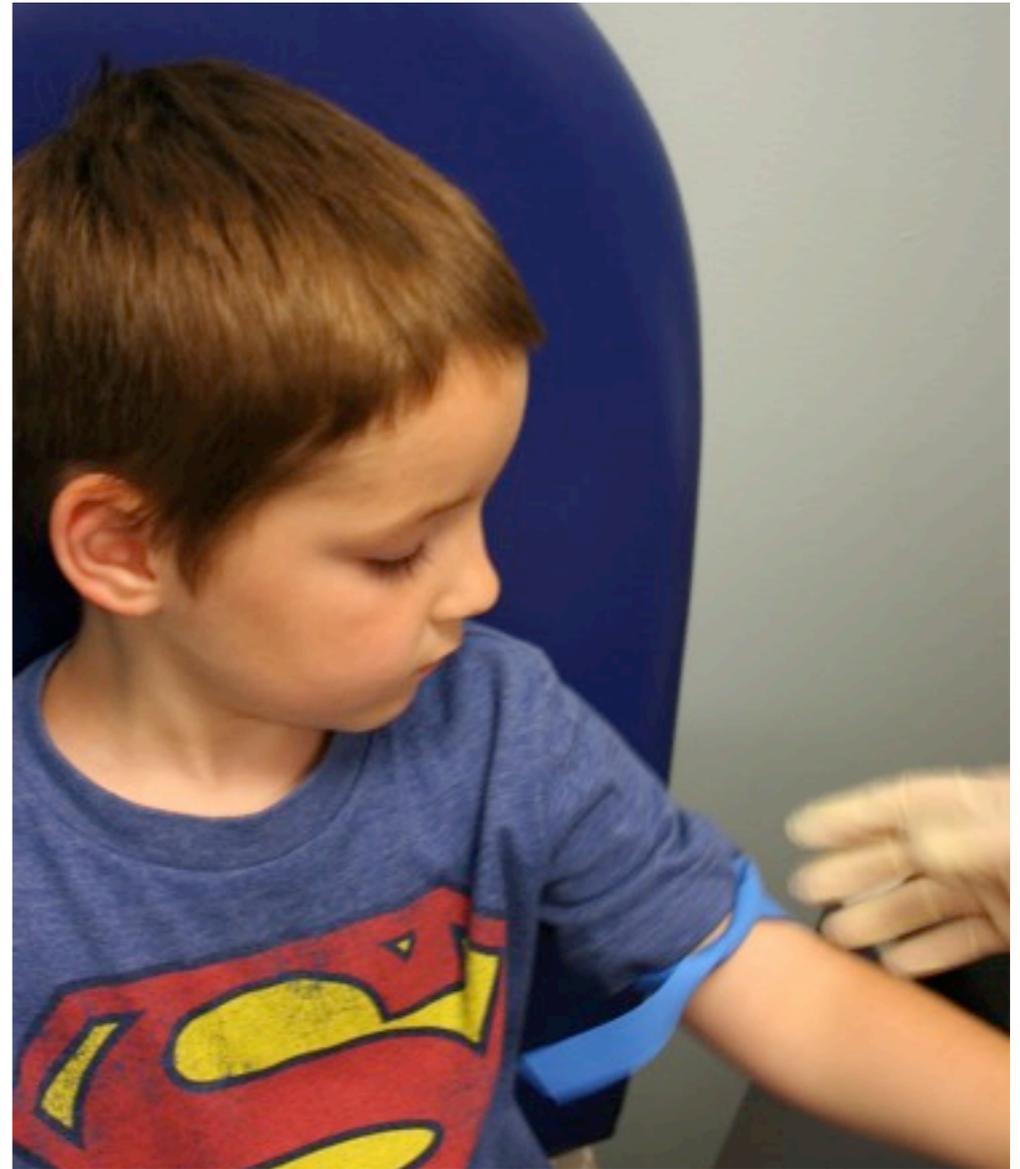

Sometimes when I see the doctor, I need to have blood test.

The blood test helps the doctor know I am healthy.

First, the nurse will clean my arm with a wipe.
It will feel a little cold.

Then the nurse will put a rubber band around my arm to help see my veins.

Then the nurse will put a small straw with a tip on it into the vein.

The blood will go through the straw into a small tube.
The tube will be labeled with my name.

Last, the nurse will take the small straw out of the vein and put a band-aide on my arm.

Sometimes, I may need some help sitting still.
I will do my very best to stay calm and follow directions.
